

NOW AVAILABLE FOR PRE-ORDER

Indiebound

Amazon

"There are books of poetry whose service approaches public ritual of private feeling. Bring Now the Angels is one of those books. It is a prayer to see more clearly one's grief & one's relationship to the vibrancy & complexity of parents & children & the natural world. This book asks about neglect & regret in order to understand how we might care for the living & the dead. What a healing collection of poems Ahmed has given us."

-Patrick Rosal

"Ahmed has two of the greatest gifts of any poet —empathy & music, which is to say: song & heart."

-Kazim Ali

"Ahmed's poems...unite body & spirit in a mood of profound & perpetual questioning."

-Reginald Gibbons

Dilruba Ahmed's debut book of poetry, Dhaka Dust (Graywolf Press), won the Bakeless Prize. Her poems have appeared in Kenyon Review, New England Review, Ploughshares, and Poetry.

Photo Credit: Mike Drzal

University of Pittsburgh Press